

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An image display system includes a photographing apparatus and an image processing apparatus connectable to the photographing apparatus. The photographing apparatus has a transmitter for transmitting prephotographed image data of an object before the object is actually photographed. The image processing apparatus has a receiver for receiving the prephotographed image data transmitted from the transmitter, and a display for displaying the received image data with the same number of pixels as the photographing apparatus.